Article 3.
Section VII. Schedule of Requirements
The provisions of item #21 in Detailed specifications per items under Section VII. Schedule of Requirements are hereby modified and they will be read as follows (all changes are written in blue text):

Office applications with perpetual licenses: minimum word processing, spreadsheet, presentations, email – pre-installed.

The office applications may be different: one for word processing, a different one for spreadsheet, a different one for presentations and a different one for email. Also, the application may be open-source if it is perpetually licensed.

In order to offer an increased compatibility between office products it is necessary for the office applications to integrate all the functionalities described in the specifications. The office applications must offer fully integration and compatibility with the Operating System. The Bidders must prove through certifications from all software manufacturers, that all the software components will be fully compatible with each other.

The laptops must be delivered with office applications with either commercial or open-source perpetual license.

The office applications do not have to be compulsorily licensed for education, any type of licensing that meets the requirement is accepted. Menus, integrated help, spelling, auto correct capabilities are mandatory in Romanian language.

The requested modules should be part of the same single office solution in order to benefit of full compatibility between them.

As a software component of the laptop, office applications must benefit from warranty, as mentioned at item 23. The office applications must offer fully integration and compatibility with the Operating System.

Is necessary to have a form of licensing that facilitates their management. Access to the license key(s) as well as to the installation kit are mandatory.
